Italy's sun-drenched landscapes generate enough solar energy to power entire cities – until clouds roll in or nighttime hits. That's where Italian mobile energy storage suppliers come into play, acting like giant “energy shock absorbers” for the grid. With 650MW of new storage capacity added in H1.

Italy has taken a major step forward in its energy transition efforts, giving the green light to 361 MW of new battery energy storage systems (BESS) spread across three regions—Lazio, Puglia, and Sardinia. This move underscores the country's growing commitment to grid resilience, energy.

As one of the continent's leading markets for battery energy storage systems (BESS), Italy's progress offers a wealth of opportunities and insights. This relevance stems not only from the country's impressive growth trajectory but also from its potential to shape the future of renewable.

Italy's energy storage landscape is undergoing a major shift, with utility-scale battery energy storage systems (BESS) experiencing exponential growth in 2024, even as residential and commercial & industrial (C&I) installations decline, according to a new report by industry group Anie.

They allow for the storage of excess energy from intermittent renewable sources like solar and wind, releasing it when needed, thus stabilizing the grid and ensuring a reliable energy supply. TERNA's goal to deploy 71 GWh of BESS by 2030 underscores how central energy storage is to achieving these.
